FACING THE LIGHT, FACING THE LOVE

With summer in full swing, sunflowers blossomed at Tamara El-Nimer and Khalil Miqdadi's wedding. A symbol of prosperity, happiness and peace, a sunflower-inspired theme was tastefully introduced by Majeda Kassir Bisharat in the garden of a magical setting away from the city. Tempering with a palette of earth-toned hues of brown, yellow, white and green, a graceful and elegant theme conveying natural accents of warmth was introduced.

Strikingly lush arrangements of yellow calla lilies complemented by yellow roses, green and yellow orchids, yellow and green craze flowers, yellow deco flowers and sunflowers float along rectangular tables clothed in brown. Brown steel-framed chairs encircle the tables, which are topped with glass plates, napkins and sunflower-themed underplates. Elegantly dropping from trusses, fawn-toned glass light fixtures float atop the tables, enhancing the amber and green lighting scheme.

Guiding the path to the buffet, a partition composed of white water pipes, some of which have been wrapped in brown material, are dressed in yellow flowers. A central aisle dotted with splendid trees leads to parquet dance floor. Along one side, mirror-topped tables encircled with white stools are dressed with glass vases capped with luscious yellow flowers and suggest a placid setting. On another side, a huge baroque screen captures the wedding in full bloom. 11
